MEASURING HINTS FOR QUICK BREADS

For quick breads to be successful, it is essential that ingredients be measured accurately.

Use the right equipment. For dry ingredients and solid shortening such as lard, peanut butter, etc., use a set of four metal or plastic graduated measuring cups, consisting of ¼, ⅓, ½, and 1 cup measures.

When measuring liquids, use a liquid measuring cup - a glass or plastic 1 -cup measure with a rim about the 1-cup line to prevent spilling. The cup should also be marked for measurements smaller than 1 cup. For measuring larger amounts of liquids, 2-cup and 4 cup liquid measuring cups are helpful.

Measuring spoons can be used for both dry and liquid ingredients. A standard set includes ¼, ½, 1 teaspoon and 1 tablespoon measures.

To measure liquids: Place the liquid measuring cup on a level surface. Lower your head so that the desired line of measurement is at eye level, then slowly pour liquid into the cup until it reaches the line. When using measuring spoons, pour the liquid just to the top of the spoon without letting it spill over. Don't hold the cup or spoon over the mixture to which you'll be adding the liquid; you may accidentally pour out too much.

To measure dry ingredients: Lightly spoon the ingredient into the measuring cup or spoon; then, with the edge, not the flat side, of a metal spatula or straight-edge knife, level off the top.

To Measure these basic ingredients:

Flour: Lightly spoon flour directly from the sack, package or canister into the cup and level off. Flour should never be packed down; never shake or tap the cup.

Sugar: Measure granulated sugar the same way as flour. Confectioners' sugar is also measured the same way; then, if necessary, sift out the lumps. Pack brown sugar lightly into the cup with the back of a spoon, then level off. If properly packed, it should hold its shape when inverted from the cup.

Shortening: Liquid shortenings, such as salad oil and melted butter or margarine, should be measured as you do other liquids.

Solid shortenings should be spooned from the can, jar or package and packed firmly into the graduated measuring cup or spoon right up to the top. Then level off with the straight (not curved) edge (and not the flat side) of a metal spatula.

Each ¼ pound stick of butter or margarine measures ½ cup. The wrapping is usually marked off in tablespoons so that the number of tablespoons needed can be just cut off with a sharp knife. If the wrapping is not marked this way, measure the same as solid shortening.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK
Orange Drop Cookies

1½ Cups packed brown sugar
1 cup butter or margarine
2 eggs
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup buttermilk

Cream brown sugar and butter or margarine; add eggs, orange peel, and vanilla. Beat till fluffy. Sift together flour, baking powder, soda, and salt. Add to creamed mixture alternately with the buttermilk, beating after each addition. Drop onto ungreased cookie sheet. Bake in 350° oven for 10 to 12 minutes. While cookies are warm, frost with Orange Icing: Combine 1 tablespoon grated orange peel, 3 tablespoons orange juice, and tablespoons butter. Stiar in 3 cups sifted powdered sugar. Makes 6 dozen cookies.
